

Andrea S. Lafferty

Andrea S. Lafferty is President of the Traditional Values Coalition (TVC), a grassroots lobby that educates and speaks on behalf of over 43,000 churches nationwide on issues of pro-family concern. In that capacity, she is responsible for setting TVC's legislative agenda and formulation of policies and strategies that promote a Judeo-Christian worldview.

Traditional Values Coalition is the only pro-family organization with a significant outreach and membership of minorities.

Prior to joining TVC, Andrea worked in the Reagan and Bush Administrations. She was Deputy Director of Government Affairs for the 1990 Economic Summit of Industrialized Nations, serving as liaison to Cabinet officials and Members of Congress. She also served as Special Assistant for Congressional and Legislative Affairs at the U.S. Small Business Administration and acted as Special Assistant to the Director, at the U.S. Office of Personnel Management. Andrea has also worked on Capitol Hill and in political campaigns.

She is in great demand as a consultant to public policy and grassroots organizations, as well as candidates for public office across the country. Andrea has received numerous invitations to speak before church and para-church organizations as well as political groups.

As a frequent guest on national television and commentator on a variety of issues, Andrea Lafferty brings the pro-family message to the American public. She has debated issues on many fronts including: Fox News Channel, The Today Show, Good Morning America, MSNBC, CNN, as well as various talk-radio programs. She has been quoted nationally in publications including the Associated Press, New York Times, Knight Ridder News, the Washington Post, Washington Times, USA Today, San Francisco Chronicle, Time Magazine, and Cosmopolitan Magazine. She has also been featured in the Washington Post, Los Angeles Times and Boston Globe.

According to the Los Angeles Times, "Her energy, tenacity and access ... impress both allies and enemies. Even those with unvarnished contempt for TVC acknowledge Andrea's ability to disarm - and even to charm."

Washingtonian Magazine has named her one of the top lobbyists in Washington, DC.

Andrea has also been a community activist. For six years she coordinated FACETS, a volunteer program through her church in Fairfax County, Virginia, which assists homeless families. She has personally cared for a number of children from broken and emotionally unstable homes and has served as a mentor to teenagers.

Andrea attended ORU in Tulsa, Oklahoma. She is married and has a son.
