The Religious Left: Sock Puppets For Atheist George Soros?

By Rev. Louis P. Sheldon
Chairman, Traditional Values Coalition

Washington, DC – The New York Times recently reported that Democrats have met with left-leaning author Jim Wallis to devise creative ways of using religion to regain political power. Democrats in the House tapped South Carolina Rep. James Clyburn to lead a “faith working group” that will “encourage lawmakers to sprinkle references to God and religion into their speeches,” according to the Times. And, Time magazine (2/7/2005) reports that the Center for American Progress, a liberal think tank partially funded by financier George Soros, will hold seminars around the United States to introduce “faith” into policy discussions.

Democrats have apparently tapped Jim Wallis, head of the far left Sojourners organization and Call to Renewal, to become the “values” spokesman on TV and radio. He has been a ubiquitous presence on TV talks shows in recent weeks to proclaim that the religious right’s monopoly on moral values is coming to an end. Wallis claims that religious conservatives think that Jesus is pro-rich, pro-war, and only pro-American.

Wallis, of course, has had a long history of support for leftist causes and now condemns what he calls the “theology of war” that is allegedly being pushed by conservative Christians in churches and in politics.

In addition, Democrats will continue to call upon the leftist pastors who head the Clergy Leadership Network. This Kentucky-based organization has received most of its seed money from America Coming Together, one of numerous front organizations funded by militant atheist and one-world socialist George Soros.

In spite of his personal hatred of Christianity, Soros and his Open Society Institute are apparently willing to use liberal clergy for his political purposes including gaining financial control of the Democratic Party, legalization of drugs, the normalization of homosexuality in our culture, and other culturally subversive activities.

FrontPageMagazine (Oct. 6, 2004) has published a lengthy three-part series on Soros and his plans for America. Using religious left sock puppets is part of his long-term strategy to overhaul our entire culture into his bizarre vision.

We’ll be hearing more from Jim Wallis, the Clergy Leadership Network, and other leftist religious leaders in the months ahead as atheist George Soros and his minions attempt to convince the American people that liberals also love Jesus. The “Jesus” talking points memos are being crafted inside liberal think tanks and will soon be rolled out to the sock puppets. Watch for the scripted “religious values” mantras on TV and radio talk shows in the near future.
